This is Melbourne, on another level!

DID YOU KNOW?

- Melbourne Skydeck is found within Eureka Tower on Melbourne's Southbank, with its top ten floors plated in 24-carat gold
- Voyager Theatre is the first—and largest—virtual reality theatre of its kind in the Southern Hemisphere
- Melbourne Skydeck is the tallest public observation deck in the Southern Hemisphere
- At 295 metres above ground level, visitors can see up to 75 kilometres in every direction on a clear day
- Melbourne Skydeck is home to the fastest elevator in the Southern Hemisphere, travelling at the speed of nine metres per second, reaching the top in a little under 40 seconds
- Send a postcard from the 88th floor—Australia's highest letterbox
- The top of Eureka Tower can flex up to 600mm in high winds
- There is enough glass to cover the MCG twice and enough concrete to fill 44 Olympic size swimming pools (110,000 tonnes)
- There are 3,680 steps from bottom to top

TO PUT THINGS IN PERSPECTIVE

At 297 metres tall, Eureka Tower is taller than:

- World Trade Centre Doha (241m)
- Big Ben, UK (96m)
- The Statue of Liberty, US (93m)
- Christ the Redeemer, Brazil (38m)
- Rialto Towers, Melbourne (270m)
- Sydney Harbour Bridge (49m)

Its taller siblings include:

- The Eiffel Tower, Paris (324m)
- The UK's Shard (310m)
- The Empire State Building, US (443m)

LOOKING BACK

The 2021 launch of Melbourne Skydeck is the latest chapter in the robust history of Eureka Tower, which was built over four years and completed in 2006. For three years, it was the world's tallest residential tower until the Ocean Heights building in Dubai was completed in 2009. Currently, it's Australia's third tallest building after Queensland's Q1 and Melbourne's Australia 108.

Eureka Tower's unique design pays homage to the Eureka Stockade, a notable rebellion in Australia's history when gold prospectors clashed with the government during the Victorian gold rush. The top ten floors of Eureka Tower are plated in 24-carat gold, a tribute to the gold rush era, while its red stripe symbolises the blood shed during the stoush.

One level up from Melbourne Skydeck is Eureka 89 – the Southern Hemisphere's highest restaurant and bar at an astounding 292 metres high. Enjoy a chef's tasting menu and fine wine with a generous side of panoramic views.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF TRADITIONAL LAND OWNERS

"We acknowledge the Wurundjeri people as the Traditional Custodians of the land we are on. We recognise their continuing connection to the land and waters and thank them for protecting this coastline and its ecosystems since time immemorial. We pay our respects to Elders past and present and extend that respect to all First Nations people present today."

AUGMENTED REALITY 3-D MODEL OF MELBOURNE

The new AR model of Melbourne is an impressive 3-D model of the city built to an accurate scale of 1:1000.

Six digital tablets surround the table providing interactive AR windows into Melbourne's diverse past, showcasing the development and stories of Melbourne through the various epochs of time. Visitors scroll between eight periods of the city's history, seeing actual 3-D projections of the historical footprint starting from pre-settlement all the way through to the future of Melbourne. The backdrop to the model is a gigantic digital wall featuring more stories of Melbourne, bringing the magic of Melbourne to life in an informative and entertaining way.

Fun facts:

- There are over 184 pieces in the model, taking almost 2240 hours (or 93 days) to print using four printers
- The central file includes volumes of data and details not existing anywhere in other 3-D cadastral (showing boundaries of land and ownership) models to date
- There were 40 3-D AR models collected to create the activation
- Data was interpreted and projected by Monash architecture professor, Dr. Tom Morgan, whose research has helped create ideas of the future image of Melbourne – the city beyond.
